Elements of a Reading Workshop to increase Stamina, Fluency, & Joy

Time
Students need time to read in class in order to create a habit of reading and set the stage for homework reading, and teachers need reading time to confer individually with students about their choices, stamina, engagement, and goals. Students need time to discuss choices with classmates, time to analyze their progress, and time to practice fluency & comprehension strategies under the direction of the teacher.

Choice
Students need to make choices in reading that reflect their interests because interest drives engagement. Teachers should encourage wide reading in all genres as well as students who pursue an author or genre study. Allow students to reread favorite books and to abandon a book that no longer interests them.

Response
Teacher conferences are the primary tool for assessing progress, encouraging goal-setting and reflection, and analyzing student needs. Students will reflect on reading in writing (themed notebooks & writers' notebooks), facilitate discussions in small groups, join blogs or reading sites for discussions outside of class, and respond regularly to other readers in the room.

Vision
Daily book talks present a wide range of voices, styles of text, categories of interest, etc. and are essential for helping students develop their own ‘to read next’ lists. We must commit to helping students define themselves as readers who like…

Expectations
All readers will develop the stamina to read longer and with greater fluency with daily practice. A reading rate is calculated regularly and students are expected to meet a weekly goal based on the challenge of the current selected text. All readers will update book lists, set goals, and read regularly each week at home.

Challenge
Monitor reading lists & teach all students to analyze choices and increase challenge; set goals based on progress towards college expectations: 200-600 pages/week; create reading ladders that help students find books of increasing difficulty within a genre; book talk a wide variety of choices including classics and world literature.

Modeling
Use short mentor texts to increase complexity & demands on readers; model storyboarding to help students understand the craft construction in short stories & novels; model you own choices as a reader: post your reading list, share books you love; show thinking & annotations in a mentor text and model “fix-it” strategies.

GUY TALK – Dear Teachers:

Thoughts about guys and reading – quotes from urban and suburban HS

A book has to make a movie in my head.

Guys like good events in a book, something that will lead one good event to another.

Reading isn’t fun if it is forced upon you.

Guys would rather stare at a rock than read.

Reading is not worth my time.

I hate anything teachers make me read.

If it doesn’t have cussing and action, I don’t want to read it.

Books tend to not keep our focus and they portray weird images and symbols we just don’t care about.

In my opinion most books corrupt the mind into false realities.

Books are only good if you put pictures in them.

If you give us boring books we will turn to internet or television for entertainment. I’m lucky my dad is a sci fi geek.

I hate it when teachers make us read books that are like 3000 years old.

I’ll read it if another guy says it’s a good book, and I’ll read it if a cute girl says it’s good – but if a teacher recommends it for the whole class to read, I get suspicious.

It’s true…

47% guys surveyed like to read

52% have read more than 10 books

100% say CHOICE MATTERS

Independent Reading Craft Analysis
Writing
Mrs. Kittle

The purpose of this project is to develop your analysis skills through a deep reading of a book you choose to read more than once this semester. Your goal is discovery. You will analyze the craft of a novel. This process will require you to more closely consider the author’s craft.

Requirements:

1. You have to love the book. Feel something. Have something to say about it. Love it enough to read it again and spend time thinking deeply about it.
2. Unpack the construction of the book (see Mrs. Kittle’s example for If I Stay) using a storyboard to highlight moments or turns of plot and your notes on how these moments contribute to the story. You’ll ask me… how detailed? That depends on how the book works. Spend enough time digging into how the story works so that you can make observations about why the author included scenes or characters or settings in the story. Remember the entire story was constructed with intention. Your job is to guess at those intentions.
3. Ask lots of questions and attempt to answer them. Some you won’t be able to answer.
4. Make connections to readers… who wouldn’t like it? Who would reread it? Who MUST read it?
5. Find out about the author. Find out anything that satisfies your own curiosity, but pay special attention to what you find out about how this author writes.

Final Products:

1. Storyboard analysis.
2. Two-three page explanation of how the novel works. There will be guesses, based on your observations and analysis, and there will be some facts included that you’ve found in research about the author.

Quarter Two Reading Ladder

Books Read: (most to least difficult)

1. The Places In Between, Rory Stewart
2. The Last True Story I’ll Ever Tell, John Crawford
3. Lone Survivor, Marcus Lutrell
4. Hole In My Life, Jack Gantos
5. Crazy For The Storm, Norman Ollestead
6. Fire, Kristin Cashore
7. Incarceron, Cathrine Fisher
8. The Mockingjay, Suzanne Collins
9. Maze Runner, James Dashner
10. Ranger’s Apprentice 7, John Flanagan
11. Ranger’s Apprentice 6, John Flanagan
12. Rangers Apprentice 9, John Flanagan

The Places In Between by Rory Stewart:

Of all the books I have read this year, The Places In Between has been the most difficult, at least based on the language and content. Fortunately I enjoyed reading it and found the story he told intriguing. Unlike Water For Elephants, whose plot really didn’t interest me very much, The Places In Between was able to keep me reading because I like the idea he had and wanted to learn more about the culture. I was distraught when his dog died and indeed he feared for his own life at times, though clearly he had to survive. While this book was one of my slowest reads, it was also one of my most rewarding.

Maze Runner by James Dashner

Maze Runner and Incarceron are based on similar concepts but are very different books. Both books are set in a gigantic prison like place who’s occupants have no idea how they got there, or even if there is anything outside. Of the two books I liked Maze Runner more. This is because the way Incarceron was written was confusing, especially in the beginning. Maze Runner does a much better job of introducing the reader into the world of the book, instead of just throwing you in the middle. I think this is because in Maze Runner you start with Thomas when he has know idea as to what is happening and so you learn with him, where as in Incarceron the main character already knows about his surroundings. Both of these books were enjoyable but Maze Runner was the one that made me want to keep reading.

Fire by Kristin Cashore

At first I was very non-committal about Fire. It was slow to start and I had heard nothing about it before picking it up. Once I got into it I was pleasantly surprised. The story was deep and engaging and the characters easy to relate to. Even though Fire is a fantasy book the characters were extremely well developed and not at all one-sided. They each had their own faults and their actions were often questionable, even when their intent was good. This made me feel for the characters more than in books like Maze Runner where you never really question if Thomas is doing what is right. This book also did something I felt The Mockingjay struggled with very well. Killing main character(s). I got very frustrated when The Mockingjay started killing off important characters without letting the reader mourn for them, but Fire managed to do it in a way that didn’t seem wasteful.

Goals/reading rate:

My reading rate for quarter two was about 150 pages a week on average. I have always been able to read books quickly if I really get into them but I think this quarter helped me build up stamina while reading books that I’m not loving. I had a lot of difficulty finding a book I wanted to read this quarter so my goal for next quarter is to find books I actually want to read. I think I might begin reading the Harry Potter series at some point, because I never did read them and I feel obligated to at least give them a try.
Cruel as It Is, We Somehow Go On

Sometimes, the earth is cruel.

That is ultimately the fundamental lesson here, as children wail, families sleep out of doors, and the dead lie unclaimed in the rubble that once was Port-au-Prince.

Sometimes the rains fall and will not stop. Sometimes the skies turn barren and will not rain. Sometimes the seas rise and smack the shoreline like a fist. Sometimes the wind bullies the land. And sometimes, the land rattles and heaves and splits itself in two.

Sometimes, the earth is cruel.

And always, when it is, we do the same thing. We dig ourselves out. We weep and mourn, we recover and memorialize the dead, we rebuild our homes. And we go on. This is the price of being human. And also, arguably, the noblest expression.

Sometimes, the earth is cruel, and you have no choice but to accept that as part of the bargain called life. And when it is your turn to deal with it, you do.

But what if it's always your turn?

Surely some homeless, dust-streaked Haitian can be forgiven for thinking it is always Haiti's turn this morning, two days after the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere saw its capital city smashed by the strongest earthquake it has ever known, a 7.0-magnitude monster. Surely, the rest of us watching from afar, experiencing tragedy and devastation from the comfort of desk chairs and living room couches, are tempted to believe the same thing.

Bad enough, Haiti is wretchedly poor. Bad enough it has a history of political instability and colonialism, of being ignored by the major powers when it is not being exploited by them. Bad enough, all that, yet at the end of the day, those are disasters authored by human hands, by human greed, human corruption, human economic predation.

Sometimes, though, you have to wonder if the planet itself is not conspiring against this humble little nation.
After 1994, when Tropical Storm Gordon killed several hundred people, after 1998, when Hurricane Georges swept away over 500 lives, after 2004, when the rains of Tropical Storm Jeanne claimed over 2,000 souls, after 2005, when Hurricane Dennis took 25 lives in July and Tropical Storm Alpha snatched 17 in October, followed by Hurricane Wilma which stole 11 more, after the double whammy of Hurricanes Fay and Gustav in 2008 killed over 130 people and destroyed over 3,100 homes, after all that, comes this latest insult -- and a death toll officials cannot begin to even imagine. Perhaps as many as 100,000, they were saying on Wednesday.

Sometimes, the earth is cruel. To crawl the planet's skin, scanning for tornadoes in Oklahoma, charting storm tracks in Florida, running from wildfires in California, is to understand this in a primal, personal way. It is to breathe a prayer that begins, ``There, but for the grace of God . . . '' It is to write relief checks, donate blood, volunteer material and time and to fear, even in the doing, that these gestures are small against the need, inconsequential against the ache of a people whose turn seems never to end.

But what else are you going to do? As the playwright put it, your arms too short to box with God. Even less have we the ability to answer the question that burns the moment: Why are the most vulnerable repeatedly assessed the highest price?

We are hamstrung by our own limitations, so we can only do what we always do, only send prayers and help. And watch, staggered by the courage it takes, as Haitians do what human beings always do, the thing at which they have become so terribly practiced.

Dig out. Weep and mourn. Memorialize the dead. Rebuild. Go on. And show the world once again a stubborn insistence on living, despite all the cruelties of the earth.

Beethoven
Shane Koyczan

Listen.
His father made a habit out of hitting him.
See, some men drink, some men yell, some men hit their children.
This man did it all because I guess all men want their boys to be geniuses.
Beethoven.
Little boy living in a house where a name meant nothing.
Living in a house where mercy had to be earned through each perfect note tumbling up through the roof to tickle the toes of angels who’s harps couldn’t hold half the passion that was held in the hands of a young boy who was hard of hearing.
Beethoven.
Who heard his father’s anthem every time he put finger to ivory
it was not good enough.
So he played slowly.
Not good enough.
So he played softly.
Not good enough.
So he played strongly.
Not good enough.
And when he could play no more and his fingers cramped up like the gnarled roots of tree trunks
it was NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

Beethoven.
A musician without his most precious tool: his eardrums could no longer pound out rhythms for the symphonies playing in his mind
He couldn’t hear the audience’s clapping couldn’t hear the people loving him couldn’t hear the women in the front row whispering
Beethoven
As they let the music invade their nervous system like an Armada marching through firing canon balls detonating every molecule in their body into explosions of heavenly sensation
Each note leaving track marks over every inch of that body making them ache for one more hit.
He was an addiction.

And Kings, Queens, it didn’t matter
The man got down on his knees for no one,
but amputated the legs of his piano
so he could feel the vibrations through the floor
The man got down on his knees for music.

And when the orchestra played his symphonies it was the echoes of his father’s anthem repeating itself
like a broken record,
a broken record
It was not good enough.
So they played slowly.
Not good enough.
So they played softly.
Not good enough.
So they played strongly
NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

So they tried to mock the man, make fun of the madness
by mimicking the movements, holding their bows
a quarter of an inch above the strings not making a sound.
It was perfect.

You see the deaf have an intimacy with silence.
It’s there in their dreams.
And the musicians turn to one another not knowing what to make of the man trying to calculate the distance between madness and genius, realizing that Beethoven’s musical measurements could take you the distances reaching past the Towers of Babylon, turning solar systems into cymbals that crash together, causing comets to collide, creating crescendos that were so loud they shook the constellations until the stars began to fall from the sky and it looked like the entire universe had begun to cry, Distance must be an illusion.
The man MUST be a genius.
Beethoven.
His thoughts moving at the speed of sound.
Transforming emotion into music.

.........

And for a moment it was like joy was a tangible thing,
like you could touch it.
Like for the first time we could watch love and hate dance together in a waltz of such precision and beauty that we finally understood that history wasn’t important To know the man
all we ever had to do was Listen.
